Dear Supporter of Public Health,

The value of coordinated public health and science-informed policies has taken on new urgency over the past two years. Throughout the pandemic, scientists, doctors, nurses and so many other health science colleagues have taken on an advocacy role to educate our communities, even as they worked to save lives impacted by Covid. The work of educating others around disease transmission and the critical role of vaccines does not stop with COVID-19.

At the Oklahoma Alliance for Healthy Families, we recognize the continued need to better inform our legislators, thought leaders and the general public. As part of our commitment to providing education, access and coordinated partnership, we are proud to announce our upcoming fall conference:

What: 2022 Stand Up for Science Summit

When: Nov. 4, 8:30 a.m. to 4 p.m.

Where: Nicholson Tower, OU Health Science Center , 1000 NE 13th St., Oklahoma City

Keynote address: Dr. Andrew Kroger, medical officer, National Center for Immunization and Respiratory Diseases at the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention (CDC)

Sessions will include best practices for increasing immunization confidence, addressing immunization misinformation, promoting immunization policies based in science and more.

Our mission, to positively impact the health of our schools, communities and families by advocating for science-based policies locally and at our state capitol, would not be possible without your support. Exclusive sponsorships are available.

Sponsorship deadline: Sept. 15

Please coordinate all sponsorship requests by contacting me directly: mcdaniel@okhealthyfamily.org
